- ✓ A state diploma in architecture (Diplôme d'État d'Architecte) is equivalent to the Master opens the way to doctoral-level study

STUDYING IN FRANCE: PRACTICALITIES

Tuition costs in France are among the lowest in the world because the French government covers such a large share of the real cost of education (€14,000/student)

| Degree         |                                                                                      | Annual tuition |
|----------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------|
| Licence |    | 184 €          |
| Master         |    | 256 €          |
| Engineer       |   | 610 €          |
| Doctorate      |  | 391 €          |

Tuition levels at private institutions are higher, ranging from €1,500 to €30,000

Enrolling in a French institution of higher education occurs in 3 steps:

Letter of admission

- Letter is issued by the institution in which the student intends to enroll
- Students from outside the EU must have a letter of admission in order to obtain a visa

1

Enrollment

(inscription administrative)

- Student enrolls upon arrival at French educational institution
- Student pays tuition
- Institution issues student ID

2

Registration

(inscription pédagogique)

- Registration completes the admission process
- Students choose courses, schedules, and preferred mode of examination

3

Students request recognition of their academic credentials (and their equivalence) in the course of applying for admission. The admission institution has sole discretion to determine the academic level at which a given student will be admitted.

Commencing one's postsecondary education

◆ To enter the first year of undergraduate study (Licence 1) or in selective programs, applicants submit:

- ✓ Request for preliminary admission (DAP) – November–January
- or
- ✓ Post-bac admission (APB) – January–March

Continuing one's postsecondary education

◆ To enroll in the second or third year of undergraduate study (Licence 2 or 3) or in graduate study (Master and Doctorate), applicants:

- ✓ Contact their chosen institution directly
- ✓ Comply with the admission deadlines set by that institution

The French government pays a very large share of the real cost of postsecondary education

Which translates into direct support for all students, regardless of origin
